

A Christian Spirituality for Hopeful Earthkeeping

7:30-9:00pm ~ Wednesday 23 March Northwest Auditorium, Trinity Western Univ.

Worried we're not caring well for God's creation?
Uncomfortable about the creation care movement?
Serious about the calls to care for God's creation and to set our hearts and minds on things above?

Starting with who we are as believers in participatory communion with Christ, I propose a Christian spirituality for earthkeeping. Via the theological anthropologies of Augustine, Moltmann and Calvin, I will shape an earth-keeping ethic. The only sustainable alternative to modern culture is listening to the living God who calls us to faithfully walk with Him by being a blessing to all of creation. I will also reflect on the importance of understanding our vocations and the ethical shape for Christian hopeful living amidst economic and ecological crises.

Dr. Martin de Wit
environmental economist

Geneva
Society

sponsored by The Geneva Society for Reformational Worldview Studies at Trinity Western University www.GenevaSociety.org & facebook.com/GenevaSociety